

Marcy Downey
Vocalist, Cabaret Entertainer

Marcy has been in show business virtually all her life, first appearing on stage at the age of four. Then after studying music and theater in college - including vocal training with Eastman School of Music's Anna Kaskas - Marcy began singing professionally with bands and show acts. In the years that followed, she performed all over the country, including appearances in Los Angeles, Lake Tahoe (including Harrah's and Caesar's), and performance halls in New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and several states along the Eastern Seaboard. She has also appeared on television, radio, and in a movie with Fabian, playing the part of his backup singer.

Marcy's voice has been heard singing commercial jingles on radio and television, and her stage appearances also include opening act for Rodney Dangerfield, Pat Cooper, Jim Stafford and others. Marcy has been a Florida resident since 1992, performing continuously. She also performs her one-woman shows in New York State, and continues to draw sold-out crowds and critical acclaim wherever she appears.
